

Aves

Gerry Cambridge

'Cambridge's knowledge of the natural world, and the human world, is transmuted by the imagination into the kind of wisdom that only a good poet can express.'

— James Aitchison

'The exactness of Cambridge's attention to each bird, each word, transforms the nature poem into a unique kind of love poem. Here, the essential mystery of a being with a heartbeat that moves through leaves and light and time can be glimpsed on its way.'

—Ann Stapleton

'An honest-to-goodness makar.'

— Times Literary Supplement

GERRY CAMBRIDGE's books include 'Nothing But Heather!': Scottish Nature in Poems, Photographs and Prose, illustrated with his own natural history photography, and Madame Fi Fi's Farewell, both published by Luath Press. His website is at www.gerrycambridge.com

Aves — the Latin name for the zoological class we know as Birds — becomes, without the ‘s’, an expression both of welcome and of farewell. Aves is a lyrical yet clear-eyed flock of homages to the winged, beaked kingdom. Twenty-two prose poems offer glimpses of the world of wild birds and the psychology of watching them. The book includes ‘A Dropped Feather’, a personal essay about a lifelong fascination for these vivid creatures that hover and circle above, and dart through, our days.

Essence Press, ISBN 978 1 904211 06 7
184mm x 123mm, 64pp

Cheques payable to:
“Essence Press”
Julie Johnstone
8 Craiglea Drive
Edinburgh EH10 5PA

Inscribed copies available on request; please include a note with your order.

I wish to order ____ copy / copies of Aves @ £7.00 inclusive of post and packing.

